'Intensive Interaction' is a practical approach to interacting with people with learning disabilities [and/or autism] who do not find it easy communicating or being social ... In Intensive interaction the carer, support worker, speech and language therapist or teacher works on being a better communication partner and so supports the person with learning disabilities develop confidence and competence as a communicator' (British Institute of Learning Disabilities - Factsheet 05)

This year the Intensive Interaction Conference is moving to Scotland. At the conference delegates will be shown a number of real life examples of using 'Intensive Interaction in Action', with the approach being effectively used across a variety of different working and care contexts. Across all the presentations and facilitated workshops delegates will be shown the main rationale and practices of Intensive Interaction, how the approach works 'in action', and what common outcomes Intensive Interaction can be expected to achieve.

All delegates are welcome to come and find out more about Intensive Interaction, whether they are new to the approach, and wish to find out more about it, or whether they are experienced Intensive Interaction practitioners or managers who wish to develop their practices and services to provide better quality Intensive Interaction, and anywhere in-between.
